NATIONAL ROAD RACE CHAMPIONS

The USA Cycling Professional Road Race Championship, a one-day road race which began in 1985, was previously held in Philadelphia, PA. In 2006, the event moved to Greenville, SC. That same year, USA Cycling changed the rules for entry into the road race field for professionals. All competitors were required to be U.S. citizens, as well as be members of UCI-registered trade teams. Previously, the event was open to both American and international professional riders.

PROFESSIONAL TIME TRIAL CHAMPIONS

The USA Cycling Professional Time Trial National Championship was held for the first time in 2006 in Greenville, SC. The championship event is part of a dual championship for professionals, featuring a similar structure to the road race. This “race against the clock” championship is open to any U.S. citizen on a UCI-registered trade team. In the past, professional riders were included in the USCF Elite Men's National Time Trial Championship event.
